Denver – 303.352.1111

With a combination of business, operational, development, and legal experience in the energy generation and utilities sectors, Bobby can help clients capitalize on opportunities and mitigate risks that attorneys with less experience could easily overlook.

Bobby transforms complexity into strategic opportunity.

In both vertically integrated and organized markets, Bobby has led commercial, regulatory, and litigation aspects of wholesale power sale and purchase transactions, transmission development, industrial and manufacturing loads, and cloud storage and data center projects.

On the generation side, Bobby has supported the development of all aspects of nuclear, solar, wind, and battery energy storage systems, including project finance, the acquisition and development of existing and new advanced nuclear facilities, and long term off-take agreements.

Clients deeply appreciate his keen, practical perspective when working through transactions and navigating regulations. This perspective is the result of a deep understanding of the utilities and energy markets, gained from decades of working for investor-owned utilities, a federal agency and transmission system, and cooperative and municipal public power systems.

Whether supporting clients at the negotiating table, before boards, at state commissions, or in federal regulatory matters, he brings a solutions-oriented approach developed through significant roles at Duke Energy, TVA - the Tennessee Valley Authority, and NiSource.

At Dorsey, Bobby is positioned to use this broad and deep knowledge to help clients adapt to shifting market dynamics, strengthen their regulatory position, advance commercial goals, and maximize their legal investments. Matters that other firms might

Strategic Initiatives

- Secured approvals, implemented new business practices, and integrated the reform into enterprise-wide transition strategies, to cut interconnection timelines by more than half.
- Developed the analytical model demonstrating systemic risks of unplanned PURPA solar procurements, leading to the elimination of billions in rate-payer compulsory over-procurements and contributing to legislative reforms.
- Designed and implemented an alternative financing mechanism to fund system upgrades for new generation assets, also reduced cost recovery lag and leakage.
- Launched and executed on reforms to accelerate commercial, third-party installation of zero-emissions power production.
