Bret provides strategic legal counsel on employee benefits and related corporate governance matters.

Bret has broad experience in advising employers on a range of employee benefits and executive compensation programs with a focus on the tax, labor, and securities regulations that impact these programs.

He represents private and publicly held businesses, including large multi-national corporations, in addressing the unique corporate, governance, and benefits issues that impact these organizations.

He works with clients that have complex organizational and management structures, including multiple employer plans and professional employer organizations.

Bret aims to become an extension of his clients' compliance team and often advises management committees, compensation committees, and boards of directors on strategic business initiatives and compliance matters.
