The Dorsey Health Law blog team keeps readers up-to-date on relevant topics in the health care industry. In order to do so, the members of the blog team communicate regularly with other practice groups within the firm for applicable updates from client publications. For this post, we would like to thank Dorsey's Alex Hartzell for the following post on the FCA Now blog:

Fresh off the new year, the Department of Justice ("DOJ") continues to announce new settlements under the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729 et seq ("FCA")—further cementing the trend of private parties suing borrowers for violating requirements of the Paycheck Protection Program ("PPP" or the "Program"). Two new FCA settlements were announced earlier this month involving relators' allegations that borrowers made false statements when applying for PPP loans in violation of Program rules.
