Liz is a complex commercial litigation attorney committed to providing efficient and effective representation for clients in heavily regulated industries.

Based in New York, she represents a broad array of corporate and individual clients in high-stakes matters spanning healthcare litigation, financial services litigation, construction litigation, employment litigation, litigation of intellectual property disputes, white collar criminal defense, and food and beverage labeling claims.

Liz brings deep experience defending clients at the intersection of regulatory scrutiny and courtroom advocacy — from federal enforcement actions to commercial disputes and IP conflicts. Her cross-industry background allows her to provide strategic, results-oriented counsel to clients navigating complex legal and regulatory environments in New York and beyond.
