Hannah is a strategic and trial-tested advocate who leverages deep courtroom experience and sharp investigative instincts to efficiently resolve complex disputes.

As a litigator and trial attorney, Hannah has extensive experience handling high-stakes matters. Prior to joining Dorsey, she was selected through the Attorney General's Honors Program at the Department of Justice to serve as an Assistant United States Attorney in Washington, D.C., where she tried over a dozen cases to verdict and led complex multi-defendant investigations through resolution. She has handled a broad range of matters, including large-scale conspiracies, fraud, hate crimes, and high-profile violent crime. Earlier in her career, Hannah clerked for the Hon. Michael O'Keefe in the Superior Court of the District of Columbia and interned for the Hon. Paula Xinis in the U.S. District Court for the District of Maryland. Prior to her clerkship, she also worked as a civil litigation clerk at a mid-Atlantic firm.
