Josh assists companies with strategic development and monetization of patent portfolios in every stage of growth.

Josh has more than twenty years of experience covering every aspect of patent portfolio management, including the preparation and prosecution of patent applications, portfolio sales and acquisitions, litigation support, and patent licensing. He has represented clients in a wide variety of technical areas, including semiconductor device design, manufacture, and assembly, telecommunications, aerospace, and software.

Josh has prior experience serving as in-house patent counsel for several leading global technology companies, where he managed patent portfolios comprising thousands of patents and directed the filing of hundreds of U.S. and foreign patent applications every year. He has leveraged his in-house experience to help clients develop and implement intellectual property management programs for the early identification and strategic protection of high-value innovations.
