Justin provides clients with legal services in cross-border commercial litigation, international arbitration, trade compliance and other regulatory matters.

With New York state bar license and PRC legal qualification, Justin is an associate at Dorsey's Beijing office, focusing on cross-border commercial litigations and arbitrations in extraterritorial disputes. His practice areas also include economic sanctions, export control, financial services and other regulatory compliance. Prior to obtaining his J.D. degree in the U.S., he studied international politics at two of the most prestigious schools in this area in the U.S. and China, namely Politics Department of New York University and University of International Relations in China, which equips him with unique and insightful perspectives when he renders his services.

Justin has ample experience in advising Chinese and international clients, including renowned state-owned enterprises in China, U.S. and EU based multinational enterprises, and private companies, covering multiple sections, including banking, finance, mining, life science and TMT.

Before joining Dorsey, Justin worked at one of the largest Chinese law firms in Beijing.
