Krista litigates high-stakes disputes and advises clients on a full range of employment issues.

Krista is an experienced employment attorney and litigator. She represents clients in high-stakes disputes in court and arbitration. Krista handles all types of employment litigation, from claims of discrimination and retaliation to cases involving compensation disputes, workplace accommodations, and medical leaves. Krista also litigates a variety of commercial disputes, including breach of contract, fraud, defamation, and consumer privacy cases.

Krista counsels clients on a full range of employment issues, from hiring and discharge to restrictive covenants and compliance with the ever-changing landscape of New York employment law. She helps businesses develop effective workplace strategies to manage employment risks, and skillfully advocates for clients when litigation ensues.

Throughout her career, Krista has devoted considerable time to pro bono work. She has represented individuals in civil rights and consumer fraud litigation and counseled non-profit organizations on employment matters.
