Meredith specializes in the complex landscape of health care regulatory and transactional matters.

With a background in health law and public health, Meredith provides strategic support to clients across the health care industry. Meredith helps clients navigate health care regulatory and compliance questions and assists with health care transactions and contractual arrangements. Meredith's practice focuses on health care fraud and abuse laws, Medicare and Medicaid programs, compliance with HIPAA and other state and federal privacy laws, investigations, and state licensing requirements. She holds a J.D. and Master's in Public Health from the University of Minnesota.

Select Experience

- Conducted due diligence review and regulatory research on large corporate healthcare transactions, including reviewing payor and vendor agreements, ensuring compliance with notice of material change requirements, conducting privacy review, ensuring Stark and anti-kickback compliance, and completing required change of ownership processes for certificates, licenses, and permits.
- Drafted and received approval for Medicare, Medicaid, and state license change of ownership applications for multiple long-term care providers and coordinated with regulatory agencies to ensure approval.
- Advised hospitals and physician practices on regulatory and strategic matters, including reviewing professional services agreements, updating notices of privacy, drafting memoranda of understanding, and navigating scope-of-practice guidelines.
- Supported investigations for health care clients, including allegation of anti-kickback violations and civil investigative demand.
