The Dorsey Health Law blog team keeps readers up-to-date on relevant topics in the health care industry. In order to do so, the members of the blog team communicate regularly with other practice groups within the firm for applicable updates from client publications. For this post, we would like to thank Dorsey's Alex Hartzell for the following post on the FCA Now blog:

The Department of Justice ("DOJ") continues rolling out new settlement agreements related to COVID-19 fraud—highlighting the government's and a common relator's efforts to crack down on those alleged to have improperly received monies through the Paycheck Protection Program ("PPP" or "Program"). A new settlement agreement once again showcases these trends and illustrates the civil liability that businesses and individuals may face under the False Claims Act, 31 U.S.C. § 3729 et seq ("FCA") for double-dipping into PPP loan funds made available in 2020 during the height of the pandemic.
