Robert is a business attorney that partners with clients in complex commercial transactions and has significant experience both as a corporate lawyer and as a construction lawyer. Robert's focus is to achieve a client's strategic goals by offering creative and business-savvy legal advice that draws upon his significant expertise.

Robert specializes in assisting clients in the development and construction of complex commercial and industrial projects, including the preparation of all contracts necessary to bring the project to fruition. In addition to general construction projects, Robert specializes in all phases of the development and construction of alternative energy and renewable energy projects, ranging from early-stage development to leading M&A transactions involving the acquisition or sale of a project. He has served as lead counsel in the development of numerous wind energy projects, solar energy projects, hydrogen energy projects, and natural gas-fired energy production facilities.

Robert's experience includes business contracts, complex construction projects, procurement contracts, engineering services agreements, operations and maintenance agreements, real estate development, business formations, joint ventures, and mergers and acquisitions.

Robert also serves as outside general counsel to a number of companies, providing legal and governance advice to the management and the board of directors of those clients. As a trusted advisor, he assists his clients in achieving their business objectives in the context of the increasingly complex legal environment in which businesses operate today.

He is a member of the Firm's Real Estate and Development Practice Group, the Construction and Design Practice Group, the Food and Beverage Industry Group, and the Cooperative Law Practice Group.

Robert is the former Head Partner of the Firm's Denver office. Robert represents
