Tom delivers value to clients by working with a high degree of autonomy on trademark matters, thereby permitting attorneys in the practice group to focus on more complex issues.

Tom combines his more than two decades of experience in both domestic and international trademark practice with a problem solving approach in addressing client needs.

For clients for whom Tom has served over many years, he has developed an institutional memory of their historical trademark matters, giving him the ability to efficiently address issues that require a familiarity with past events, such as third-party disputes, agreements, transactions, etc.
